Hongkone, August 21st, 1877.

It is a wise and sound policy to encourage honesty and humanity when displayed by natives, for unfortunately these qualities are too rarely exhibited by them. Thus the Government has, on different occasions, very properly rewarded Chinese boatpeople and others when they have put themselves out of the way to succour or assist those in distress, whether natives or foreigners, and others have been publicly commended for some exceptional display of honesty or integrity. But there is a possibility of this sort of thing being overdone; there is some likelihood, apparently, of our forgetting to credit the Chinaman with sharing our common humanity. It is not fair to him to suppose that we have a monopoly of the virtues. It may be granted that his training is bad and that the code of morality prevailing in China is much lower than ours, but it does not follow that he know what is right. have only to refer to the teachings of Chinese sages to see that honesty and humanity are both inculcated, and that the rior to their theories. To suppose, therefore, that they are so ignorant and so debased that phenomenal is scarcely doing justice to them. common enough among them is calculated to of them undone would not be any dereliction of duty. The Japanese Press, as well as the Government, is now fully aware that Russia is the Power from which the land-of the Rising Sun has most to fear. The Mai. ship Benledi, and James Huntley, belonging to nichi Shimbun, in an article on the enemies of Japan; says "that it has nothing to fear from the great nations of Europe and America. The Japa- ried to the station -nese, aware that Yesso is the most exposed of all their territory to Russian designs, are endeavouring to develop the resources of that island and to colonise it. With this design they have commenced coal mining there with much success. The Iwanai mine is said to be very rich, and a cargo of coal from and has been spoken of very favourably. Some parts of Niphon and Kiushiu are decidedly over-populated, and it would be wise policy for the Japanese Government to hold out inducements to the natives to emigrate to Yesso. By thoroughly settling the island the Japanese would at least deprive any hostile or ambitious Power of the plea that Yesso was an outlying and sparsely in-
